

Jerome Fernand Coulombe

Jerome entered the US Army in 1942.

He told the story of how he was at a training when everyone was asked if they knew how to ride a motorcycle. Knowing the Army would show you how to do it their way he lied, and said he did. He became an M.P. and rode a Harley during the war.

He was proud that had the opportunity to provide security escort service for Winston Churchill.

He served until 1946 when he returned to Jay, Maine to work for International Paper and raise a family.
